Biografie

Minna Taylor is the Founder of Energize Your Voice, a global communication coaching and training firm, author of The Confident Body, international speaker, and influential thought leader in the theory and application of PLAY. She is committed to helping visionary leaders and their teams transform the world. Her work has spread over three continents, 15+ years, and impacted over 5,000 individuals.

She has devoted her career to supporting thousands of leaders and their teams experience deeper connection and belonging through play. Play is an access point for risk taking, pathway for authenticity, and framework for moments of challenge and change. You can book her for keynotes and workshop/ training sessions. She lives and works from Amsterdam, The Netherlands.

Minna Taylor began as a struggling actress with an MFA who cleaned houses to make ends meet and consistently felt ridiculous for bringing play to serious people in suits, when those serious people in suits were still convinced that communication needed to be information first and inspiration last and that bringing authenticity and storytelling into work was a sign of weakness. 15 years later, the tables have turned and play has become their secret ingredient to success.

With an experiential approach, rooted in the principles of play and performance, Minna supports organizations, individuals, and entrepreneurs to explore their full potential in speaking, storytelling, and leadership communication.

CLIENTS MINNA TAYLOR
